THE AUSTRALIAN CRICKETERS.

Beaten by Six Wickets in the Match Against All England.

The London Daily Chronicle says that the stand of Giffin and Darling in the match against the South of England may rank as one of the most noteworthy feats ever accomplished in that country. The partnership of these two Australians yielded 213 runs, and the strange part of it all was that each man retired with 115 runs to his credit.

Pougher, the Leicestershire bowler, who was principally instrumental in disposing of the Australian eleven in their match with the Marylebone cricket team for 18 runs, got two wickets for no runs in his first over. His second over was a maiden, while in the third he scored three wickets for no runs. His is a phenomenal record. Pougher never took a wicket in the second inning, Hearne capturing every wicket except Giffin, who did not bat.

The match between the Australians and All England eleven resulted in a victory for the latter team by six wickets.

It was Lohman and Richardson who accomplished the great feat of disposing of the Australian eleven in the cricket match against the All England team for 53 runs.

THE LAST OPPORTUNITY.

every American in the Northern States has experienced it when spending a winter on the farm. The gray sky is as true to nature as nature itself and the snow is so well laid on that one can easily imagine its depth. To the people of Honolulu who only read of such things a picture of this character will do much toward decreasing the desire for an expensive trip to the States.
